

BASIC-LEVEL COURSE | FOR HEALTH PROFESSIONALS

July - September 2022

PalliLearn aims to build community knowledge, death literacy, compassion literacy and community capacity in relation to serious illness, dying, death and grief, by providing quality and easy to understand education courses.

Who can attend?

The courses are designed as basic training for those working or involved in the health sectors. For example: nurses, social workers, allied health staff, AINs, pastoral care workers, pharmacists, paramedics, volunteer coordinators and community development workers. There is no requirement for training or experience within the palliative care space to attend.

Why attend?

The way we care for our dying reflects our community and society. Through training, we can create resilience, understanding and capacity within our health and social sectors to improve the care we provide for our clients, carers and their loved ones.
