

Graduate Certificate of Diabetes Education

Indigenous Scholarship – Expression of Interest (EOI)

AHPRA registered Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Health Practitioners* are invited to express their interest to complete the fully funded Graduate Certificate of Diabetes Education online course.

Northern Queensland Primary Health Network, in partnership with James Cook University, is offering a limited number of placements for students to further their knowledge of diabetes while upskilling to administer safe, effective, client-centered care and education to individuals, and to support the public health and education of communities and people living with or at risk of diabetes.

Core subjects

- Health Education and Self-Management
- Foundations of Clinical Diabetes
- Applied Clinical Diabetes Education
- Diabetes Education Professional Practice

Limited places are available and will be assessed based on criteria outlined in the registration form.

Expressions of interest close close of business Friday 4 April 2025.

Applicants must be working within an Aboriginal Medical Service (AMS), Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Organisation (ACCHO), general practice, or Torres and Cape Hospital and Health Service (TCHHS) Primary Care Clinic within the NQPHN region.*

Format

Online course

Duration

8-months (part-time)

Structure

4 core subjects

40 hours of clinical placement

20 hours of professional development

EOI registration

forms.office.com/r/sasvvcH1TF

