

Culturally Responsive Care: Supporting Australian South Sea Islander Patients in general practice

Are you a general practitioner (GP) or work in primary care with Australian South Sea Islander (ASSI) patients?

Northern Queensland Primary Health Network (NQPHN) are offering cultural awareness training for clinical and non-clinical staff working in a general practice setting.

Why attend?

- Build your knowledge base and awareness in the delivery of culturally appropriate health care for this distinct and unique cultural group.
- Learn practical strategies for inclusive healthcare delivery.
- Strengthen relationships and your engagement with ASSI communities and patients.
- Contribute to equitable health outcomes.

Training facilitator

Join Marion Healy, a professional consultant and cultural competence trainer, with 30 years of service in Education Queensland. Marion founded Mer Bar Wakai Consultancy and is a cultural trainer with a strong background in community engagement and health equity.

Mer Bar Wakai translates to 'Everyone's Voice' and has recently delivered impactful training for clinicians at Mackay Hospital and Health Service.

Register your interest today!

Help us shape the schedule by expressing your interest early. Catering will be provided for all participants at each session.

Date

Availability from January to July 2026

Time

Various session times available

Where

Multiple venue options available

Register online

Tailor your own sessions
forms.office.com/r/jVzx6QvBkq

